Introduction

During the last twenty years, Somalia has been through different stages. Since the collapse of the Siyad Barre regime in 1991, there was the civil war, the war lords and a number of transitional governments which all lead to Somalia getting divided into small states which came out to represent certain tribes and regions without looking into the national interest of Somalia.

Considering that all the transitional governments of Somalia have not brought in any positive change in the current situation of the Somali people who is still victim of the war between the different parties with different political agenda in Somalia. It is time to call the tribal leaders in Somalia to perform their national duty towards their people and to reach a solution which brings real national conciliation and saves the lives of the Somali people.
